Plugins and scripts are different.

I've seen a table plugin installed on a wordpress site.

Its very interesting features make it easy for site owners not to update according to the specified time.

Below are some wordpress that use automatic plugins

So what about scripts?

The script is intended for a self-built site. Not for wordpress CMS or others. It does have the exact same use. However, it is easier to use a plugin than a script (my version) does anyone sell plugins or scripts according to our needs, yes of course there is. Please search on the internet. There are so many providers with the advantages of each development